

Black-legged ticks are very small and can be very difficult to find on people and pets.

(Image retrieved from: medicineworld.org)

Black-legged ticks can be active year round, both nymphs and adults can transmit disease. In winter, they are active if the temperature is above 32 degrees.

(Image: www.aldf.org)